Changing the world one case at a time

Yana Henriks knows what it means to win a hopeless case. Taking on a Goliath medical establishment, she managed to win a $2.7 million jury award recently for a five-year-old boy whose father died because a doctor didn't do his job. "Nobody thought we could win this one," says Henriks, a named partner in McMurray Henriks, LLP, one of the fiercest firms of trial attorneys in Los Angeles. "Our opponents fought for years not to pay a dime. It was a scorched-earth policy designed to deny our young client justice. But the jury knew we were right. It's like changing the world one case at a time."

Together with partner Randy McMurray, Henriks and the firm's lawyers have earned tens of millions of dollars in awards and settlements for the victims of medical malpractice, civil rights violations, personal injury, elder abuse and defective products.
